

Power Move 6: Engineering the Experience

Building Your Experience Frameworks

Messaging makes the promise audible. Experience fulfills the promises made.
This worksheet turns your brand's promises into an operational system.

DEFINE THE EXPERIENCE STANDARD

Write the standard in plain language.

What is the experience supposed to feel like? (Remember, the more visceral the better)

What must never happen?

What must always happen?

MAP THE JOURNEY (PHASES, NOT VIBES)

Describe the phases your buyer walks through when engaging with your brand.

Discovery and first contact

Diagnosis and sales

Onboarding

Execution and delivery

Offboarding and follow-up

Now think about the questions below in the context of each phase. Write any added notes below.

Questions to apply to every phase:

- What is the buyer trying to get?
- What is the buyer afraid of?
- What is the one moment where trust is built or broken?
- What does clarity look like here?
- What boundary must be enforced here?

Jot any added thoughts here.

Discovery and first contact:

Diagnosis and sales:

Onboarding:

Execution and delivery:

Offboarding and follow-up:

BUILD THE EXPECTATION SCRIPT

Ambiguity creates complaints. Expectations prevent them. Write the expectations that must be stated.

What happens next?

What is the timeline?

What is required from the client?

What is not included?

How does communication work?

What response time is normal?

INSTALL PROACTIVE CLARITY

Pick three places where silence creates anxiety. Then design the proactive clarity.

What gets sent before a meeting?

What gets sent after a meeting?

What gets sent weekly/regularly without fail?

ENFORCE BOUNDARIES WITHOUT DRAMA

Write the boundary then write the script. Remember, boundaries are essential for the health of your business, your personal sanity and sense of self-respect, as well as being important components of your brand's positioning and safeguards for relationships between your business and the market. Internally and externally, boundaries will help you build a business you actually get to love running while helping others respect and love it more too.

Office hours and channels:

Revision process:

Scope creep:

Timeline pressure:

Boundary script template.

"That request falls outside the agreement. Two options exist. Add it as a change order with adjusted timeline and investment, or prioritize it for phase two after the current scope is complete. Which works better?"

DESIGN THE TOUCHPOINT MENU

These are not random gifts, gimmicks, or branded swag nobody actually keeps or uses. These are small, intentional actions that reinforce posture.

Pick 5 touchpoints. For each one, consider:

- When does it happen?
- What does it reinforce?
- What is the cost in time and money?

1.
2.
3.
4.

5.